

Giving the devil his due (I Peter 5:8-10)

We tend to _____ too much in the world around us and in our personal lives on the devil's handiwork.

When Peter makes a statement about the devil, we ought to listen!

Is the devil an idea to scoff at and skeptically dismiss? If so then Christianity has been _____ on a central understanding from the beginning.

We're speaking of the one who slips in _____ like a thief; who desires to _____ the flock, to _____ leaders, and to _____ the church from its mission.

The enemy wants to _____ the not-fully-redeemed aspects of our personalities for his purposes.

A Christian who takes Peter's advice knows a few things.

First, not one of us is _____ from the allure of temptation.

Second, temptation can be _____ (I Cor. 10:12-13). James says that if we resist the devil he will _____ from us (4:7).

Third, one of the best ways to find _____ in resisting temptation is to be _____ with fellow sufferers.
